PRO PARENTING TIPS

Use Positive Reinforcement instead of Punishment!

Research indicates that positive reinforcement is more effective than punishment in teaching children good habits. Here's an example of how you can apply it.

If you're trying to encourage your child to clean their room, praise them and perhaps give them a small reward when they do so, instead of scolding them when they don't. If they finish their homework on time, you could reward them with extra playtime or a special treat to reinforce the good behaviour. Positive reinforcement can be as simple as saying, "I really appreciate how you shared your toys today."

Positive reinforcement encourages children to continue the good behaviour.

REMINISCING INDIAN LEGENDS - FORGOTTEN IN HISTORY

Anna Mani

A pioneering meteorologist and physicist of the 20th century

She standardized around 100 meteorological instruments, established solar radiation measurement stations, and advanced research in solar and wind energy across over 700 sites. Despite gender biases impeding her PhD journey, she significantly contributed to meteorological instrumentation and ozone level measurement in post-independent India.
